ManpowerGroup Employment Outlook Survey:
Italian Employers report strongest hiring intentions for more than 6 years

At national level, Net Employment Outlook stands at +3 %
Horeca and Transport & Communication sectors are the most optimistic

Milan, September 12th 2017 - The Italian labor market may be heading in the right direction, according to ManpowerGroup, the global leader in contingent and permanent recruitment workforce solutions. According to the ManpowerGroup Employment Outlook Survey released today, the fourth-quarter Outlook of +3% is the strongest hiring forecast reported since 2011 and indicates employers are demonstrating a rise in confidence in hiring activity.

“Although it’s too early to say that a full-blown recovery is upon us, it does feel like we’re turning a corner when it comes to the jobs market,” Stefano Scabbio, President Mediterranean, Northern and Eastern Europe ManpowerGroup says. “Over the last few months, several indicators have turned green in Italy and we’ve noticed a boost of confidence among employers, particularly in the market for permanent hiring. Since the demand for talent in Italy heats up, employers need to bring their talent strategy to the forefront of business planning. Whatever the strategy, building a talent pipeline takes time and should be a key business focus in the next months.”

Employers in North East Italy report the strongest hiring prospects for the October-December period with a cautiously optimistic Net Employment Outlook of +9%.
